A quote that I liked from this reading was, “the listener's minds will never trust or have faith in the kind of illustration based on the unfamiliar and obscure - or demonstration that is not outstanding,”(496)

A quote that was harder for me to understand was, “the truth is that I feel my soul foursquare against the blows of chance,” (491)

Is St. Thomas referring to God or someone else as he says, “He sent His bride, two champions who through their words and deeds helped reunite the scattered company?”
